If caterpillars are attacking trees, re nove and burn the eggs, or thoroughly soap the trees to prevent their being laid, kill them if already laid, or hang bottles of sweetened water about the trees to entrap and destroy the perfect moth.

If borers are in the trunk or branches, soap the bark. Soft soap made cold is, perhaps, the best preparation, and if mingled with a strong decoction of tobacco it will not be less effect tive. Dig out the borers with knife or gouge, or pour boiling water, or petroleum, into their holes, making sure that it reaches the insect.

If insects are on the leaves or fruit, syringe the trees with any of the preparations previously recommen soap-suds, tobacco-water, etc. Jar them frequently, giving the pigs and poultry a chance to pick up and devour those which fall.

Hang pieces of cloth or paper dipped in kerosene, in the branches, renewing them every few days.

For insects upon roots and bulbs, sprinkle petroleum along the rows, or water them with strong soap-suds; for enions, mingle common soot, or pyroligueous acids with the solution. For squash and cucumber vines, etc., scatter paper-rags, saw-dust, or other absorbent materials, soaked in kerosene, about the hills, sprinkle the leaves with road-dust, air-slacked lime, ashes, or powdered herbs known to be offensive to the insects. The Persian insect-powder, which has proved quite useful of late years, is composed of the pulverized leaves and blossoms of fever few, the Pythethrum carnoum, closely allied to the common camomile. It would be really worthy of experiment to collect, dry and powder the flowers of our common ex-eye daisy, or white weed, so common through the country, and ascertain the effect upon insects and slugs which attack our broad-leaved plants, as well as upon the moths which infest furs and woolen cloths.

Chlorido of lime, freely scattered upon the ground among growing vegetables, gives off a gas which is extremely noxious to most insects, without injuring the plants. Coal tar is also quite serviceable in some cases.

For field crops, the most feasible plan is, by rotation, to starve out the destructive millions that prey upon one variety, devoting the land to some other crop for two seasons before returning to the original one. Small fields of wheat, rye or oats may sometimes be saved from immediate injury by building a line of fires on the windward side, and burning scraps of leather, wet straw, and such substances as cuit a thick, offensive

A CLEAN SELL - A shrowd countryman was in town the other day, gawky, nneouth, and innocent enough in reality with his eye teeth cut. up Chatham street, through the Jews quarter, he often was encountered with importunities to buy. From almost many the street of every store some one rushed out in necordance with the annoying custom of that street, to seize upon and try to force him to purchase. At last, to force him to purchase. At last, one of them caught him by the arm and urged him to become one of his

"Are they clean?" "To be sure, sir. Step in, sir."

"Then," resumed the countryman, with perfect gravity, " put one on, for you need it."

The rage of the shopkeeper may be imagined as the countryman, turning upon his heel, quietly pursued his Way.

CLERICAL CALLS .- An exchange, alluding to the fact that most of the "calls" which modern elergymen feel so imperatively bound to obey, are from comparatively low salaries to high ones, says that these "calls" remind him of the honest old negroe's anecdote, which, though well known, is good enough to repeat often.

A certain divine, having concluded to change his pastoral situation, mentioned his determination from the pulpit. After service was over, an old negro, who was one of his admirers, went up to him and desired to know his motives in leaving his flock. The parson answered :-

"I had a call." "Where from, massa?" said the

Our stock is old, and consists of Did you give her my card? asked an the inexperienced young gentleman of a little boy whose mother had given him and Smoking Toldenes, by the keg or barret, at Detroit prices, thus saving freight to parties buyan invitation to call upon her, and whose street door was accordingly opened to his untimely summous by the urchin aforesaid.

"Yes, I gave it to her," was the innocent reply, "and she said if you wasn't a nat'ral fool, you wouldn't come Monday morning, when every body was washing!"

At this juncture, mamma, with a sweet smile of welcome, made her appearance at the end of the hall, when to her surprise, Mr. Verisopht, the visitor, bolted. "What does the man mean?" inquired mamma. "I dunno," replied bub, "guess he's forgot sumthin."
